

Stop Couch Cushions from Sliding

A One-Page Visual Decision Guide

A quick reference to help you identify why your couch cushions slide, choose the right solution, and know when it's time to replace them.

Step 1: Find the Real Cause

Start here before buying any products.

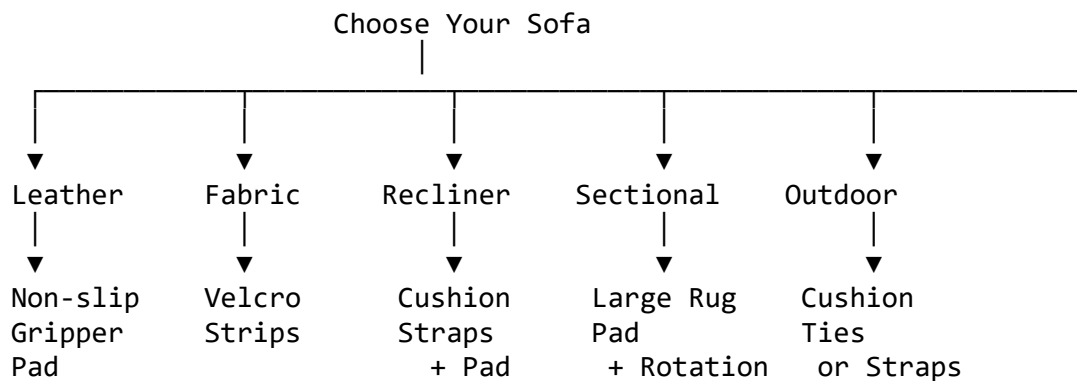

Common Causes

- Smooth leather or microfiber upholstery
- Worn-out or compressed cushion foam
- Loose or stretched cushion covers
- Sloped sofa seat or frame
- Weak support webbing or springs

- Dust, pet hair, and everyday wear

Step 2: Choose the Best Solution for Your Sofa

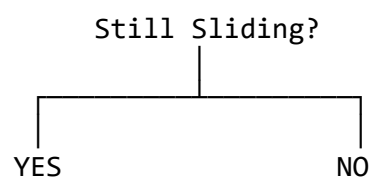

Different couches require different solutions.

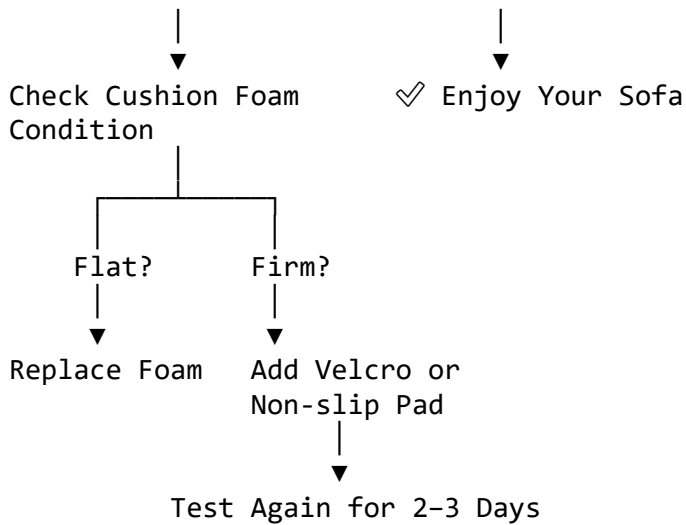

Quick Recommendations

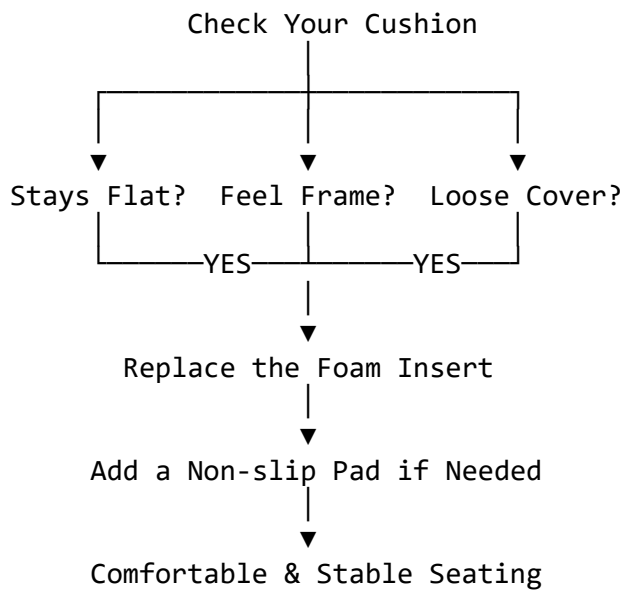

Sofa Type	Best Solution
Leather Sofa	Non-slip gripper pad
Fabric Sofa	Velcro strips
Recliner Sofa	Elastic cushion straps
Sectional Sofa	Large non-slip rug pad
Outdoor Sofa	Cushion ties or straps

Step 3: Are Your Cushions Still Sliding?

Step 4: Should You Replace the Cushion?

Replace Your Cushion Foam If:

- ✓ The cushion stays flat after sitting
- ✓ You can feel the sofa frame
- ✓ The cover has become loose or wrinkled

- ✓ The cushion slides despite using anti-slip products
 - ✓ The foam is more than 5–10 years old

Quick Maintenance Checklist

Complete these simple tasks once a month.

- ☐ Vacuum underneath the cushions
 - ☐ Rotate seat cushions regularly
 - ☐ Fluff cushion inserts
 - ☐ Check non-slip pads or Velcro strips
 - ☐ Tighten loose cushion covers
 - ☐ Replace worn foam when necessary

My Recommendation

Start with the simplest solution.

If your cushions are still firm and comfortable, begin with a non-slip gripper pad. It's affordable, easy to install, and works well on most leather and fabric sofas.

If your cushions have become flat, sagging, or uncomfortable, replacing the foam insert is usually the best long-term solution.

Remember: the right fix depends on the real cause, not just the symptom.
